With the eyes, of an old cowboy
Who knows what it's like to live in the wild,
You study my face, like you're reading my life,
And not for the first time, I realise, that you've always been,
in that crazy, confused heart of mine

To you I have been, one simple girl,
To me I have lived, 3 or 4 lives, You've watched me grow up (And )you've seen me cave in,
And all along, you've always been

I see how you look (now), at my aging face,
How you put the pieces of me, back into line,
You don't need to count, the number of days to know how long, you have been, part of that crazy, confused heart of mine

I guess our paths, were always meant to cross, I s'pose that we were always meant to be,
Part of, one, colliding mind, however far, you once were, from that crazy, confused heart of mine
